Grandpa rabbit is excited for spring. But he also feels that it will be his last. He has become old and tired. That's why he decides to talk about death with the little rabbit, to tell him that he will die. The little rabbit doesn't want to believe that grandpa will go away forever. But then he gets curious and starts asking many questions. Together they experience a wonderful summer. As the fall approaches Grandpa rabbit feels that his time has come. The little rabbit stays by his side until his last breath. He is of course terribly sad but still he knows that grandpa will always be in his heart.
