- Authentic insights
- How children and teenagers handle death
- A book which leaves traces of bravery

This book by Sabine Rachl recounts the stories of dying children, their siblings, parents and grandparents. Alexandra, Lucián, Kim, Hauke, Elvi, Erich and many others talk about their experiences with terminal cases and being alive, which has changed because of death. These are stories of laughing and crying, of pain and joy and of the connection which will always remain – stories which encourage because they show that dying is part of life.

About the author

Sabine Rachl works as music therapist in the Children's Hospice in Wuppertal, as lecturer and educational consultant for the dealing with loss and grieving. Among other things, she has founded a school with her husband.
