- Helpful and compact guide for executives and HR managers at companies and institutions
- The author is well-networked within both the corporate context and as a grief counsellor

Death and mourning are part of life, so they do not stop at the company doors. However, crises of this type do not need to be a catastrophe at the workplace if executives and fellow employees know how to deal with them in a good way.

This book provides HR managers with the necessary basics for how to take appropriate action in acute cases and establish the topic of grief as part of the company culture in the long term.

About the author

Petra Sutor has worked in various positions in an international corporation for more than 20 years. She is currently a marketing manager, business coach and grief counsellor for employees. As a trained holistic-systemic coach and grief counsellor (BVT), she supports companies through seminars and accompaniment on the topic of grief at the workplace. She gives advanced training sessions and provides supervisions in day-care centres and schools, as well as accompanying families and individuals in crises and mourning situations. Her German-language website is www.sutor-trauerbegleitung.de
